The "draft to final" billing approval and dispatch period is generally a highly labour-intensive process, based largely on the preparation and distribution of physical documents.

The billing process through paper documents remains a significant obstacle between the provision of professional services and the business imperative of cash flow.

Timeframe Systems in conjunction with DocsCorp has highlighted this "gap" in the business process and developed an industry wide application that seeks to redress this problem and provide law firms with a final non modifiable bill checked directly into their DMS system and communicated automatically to their client.

The Billfiler software combines the technology of pdfDocs for creating and manipulating PDF documents with the extensive knowledge of practice management systems and software tools already created by Timeframe. The software has been developed using the latest in Microsoft .NET technologies and XML to ensure compatibility with current technologies. This software can automate completely the process of creation of the final bill and distribution to clients.
